Chapter 1 by R

She walked so casually, lightsabers swinging in her hands, the two long red blades making cuts in to the floor.

"It's been a while." She said with a grin, facing her opponent who stood stoic, blue lightsaber flashing out. Her smile wasn't too odd or too sharp, but her eyes screamed chaos and insanity."

"So it has." The Jedi said coolly.

"The Sith Empire has gotten too /bureaucratic/ for my tastes. I thought I'd find a little fun out here. I wasn't expecting that fun to be you." The Sith laughed, still twirling her twin sabers.

"You were expecting to destroy that Republic base." The Jedi responded."I will not let you do that."

The Sith grinned manically. "I was hoping you'd say that."

Chapter 2 by R

She rushed forward and attacked, lightsabers swinging, and it was all that could be done for the Jedi to block. A push on the force to knock her back, but no, the Sith kept attacking.

Her blows didn't strike, but neither did the Jedi's, and she was still in control here. Her sabers had made a few singed glances that left cuts in his robe, but nothing serious.

Then she saw it. Saw the people below, evacuating. Her eyes sparked, and she turned away from the battle to jump off of the
